

Excerpt from Dialogues Concerning Eloquence in General: And, Particularly That Kind Which Is Proper for the Pulpit Both the ancients and the moderns have treated of eloquence, with different views, and in different ways; as logicians, as grammarians, and as critics: but we still wanted an author who should handle this delicate subject as a philosopher, and a christian: and this the late Archbishop of Cambray has done in the following dialogues. In the ancient writers we find many solid precepts of rhetoric, and very just rules laid down with great exactness: but they are oftentimes too numerous, too dry; and, in fine, rather curious than useful. Our author reduces the essential rules of this wonderful art, to these three points; proving, painting, and moving the passions.
