Not illustrated. 1879 Excerpt: ...call to each other, and release each other at the right time. At the approach of twilight, when the cock, with his hens, goes to roost, men put out a night-watch. Three hours before midnight the cock stirs, and the watch is changed; at midnight he begins to crow, a third sentry takes his place; and three hours towards morn, his dayannouncing shriek calls the fourth watch to his place of duty. (To be continued.) Adjectives. When the adjective comes after the verb it undergoes no change. ?er Sifd) ii runb, the table is round. Lit irfd)en finb gut, the cherries are good. When the adjective is preceded by the definite article or any of the determinative adjectives, as: tiefer, this; iener, that; ieter, every; ter feIbe, the same; weld)er, which; mand)er, many a, it is declined as follows: When, in the nominative masculine and in the nominative and accusative neuter, the adjective is preceded by the indefinite article or any of the determinative adjectives, as: mein, bein, fein, unfer, euer (3ljr), iljr, and fein, it must take the terminations of the respective genders, as: Second Form. Mas. Nom. ein guter 9Jlann, a good man Neut. Nom. ein guteS $inb, a good child Acc. ein guteS $lnb, a good child Adjectives without Articles. Mas. In the genitive singular an n is often used for the i 5 this ending being thought more euphonical by some writers. The great emperor has, in spite of his long beard--he was only the wiser for it--coupled seriousness with mirth. He loved warm springs, and swam on many a pond: in beautiful bathing-places is Aix-la-Cha...
