

“Did you see my guest?” From the depth of postsurgical drug-induced sleep, our son raised straight up in bed demanding to know if we had seen his guest. “God sent an angel, folks, to tell me He has promised me quality time yet!” And then he returned peacefully to sleep. Just a week and a half earlier, Mike had been diagnosed with stage four lung cancer. In a private conference with his doctor, Don and I heard, “At best, Mike has a few months; more realistically, it could be only a few days.” That was on a Wednesday. Saturday morning Mike was rushed to the ER where fluid was drained and he was admitted to the hospital. Chemo began Sunday. Monday morning surgeons inserted two drainage tubes and a filter to catch clots. A few days later, Mike had a “visit” from an angel of God. Our son claimed the promise of “quality time” and thus began the incredible walk of faith for those of us privileged to be numbered Mike’s family and friends. Hi, Mike.
