

Excerpt from Last Series of Christian Aspects of Faith and Duty: Discourses I have at length yielded to the often-expressed wish of several friends that I would publish another volume of my fathers Sermons. The only consideration that has deterred me from doing so hitherto, has been the recollection of his own words, constantly repeated to those who urged him to publish more, that he would have entirely to re-write every Sermon, to put it into a shape in which he would think fit to offer it to the public. As this cannot be done now, I can but hope that the reader will remember the writers opinion, and kindly overlook anything in the style or expression that may seem to be more suitable for delivery than for publication. In making the present selection, in which I have been indebted to Dr. Martineau for considerable assistance, the choice has, with a few exceptions, been confined to Sermons written after the year 1851, and mostly preached (and in many cases written) within the last ten years of my fathers life, so as to represent the views of his later, as the former volume did those of his earlier, years.
