

Pain in the Pew; When souls become invisible, is a collection of poetry written to shine light on the secret issues of one's heart, when Sunday Morning worship is over. This array of writings depict the private tears that are shed when the preached word has come to an end, and the ear piercing music has come to a halt. Opening the secret closets of the souls in the pew; this compilation of poems will relate to the abused and mistreated, the lonely and heartbroken; and undeniably open the eyes of every Preacher, Evangelist, and Prophet. These writings will show forth various types of matters that will undoubtedly become your congregation.
