

Someone has to investigate the sleepy streets of Latching, West Sussex - and that someone is Jordan Lacey, ex-policewoman, now advertising her services as a private investigator. When she discovers the body of a nun in an abandoned hotel, along with clues to a hidden WWII fortune, she realises that she may have found more than she bargained for. The trouble is, she isn't exactly popular with the local constabulary, so when her life appears to be in danger the police aren't very sympathetic; they want more proof that she's at risk than the slice of poisoned carrot cake sent to her by a friend.
