

Sm, Fully acqtl cunted with the cordial protection and snpport Tonr Highness has always extended to Science, Literatnre, and Art, as well as to all else that tends to material and intellectual advancement, and being familiar with the fact that it was you, Sir, who gave the first impulse of Liberalism and Nationalism to my beloved country, I do myself the honour of dedicating to you this my earliest effort in the direction of a complete record of the literature of Egypt and of theS oudan. From my childhood Your Highness has spared no pains to secure for me the solid and varied education afforded in the highest families of Eastern and Western countries. In the first place, you thoughtfully entrusted me to the care of preceptors, professors, and other distinguished men who almost all belonged to that noble and generous nation which has proved itself to be the True Forerunner of Civilisation and Liberty a step which I have ever appreciated, and especially whilst pursuing my studies at theB oyal Military Academy at Woolwich, and afterwards during my long stay in England and association with the diverse phases of her everyday life. The object I have in view in the production of this Bibliography is to facilitate the acquisition of a knowledge of the enormous mass of learning which has been exercised on theM onumental Lore, the Ancient Writing and Literature, and theM ediaeval and Modern History of that simple but mysterious country whose great antiquity, no less than the problem of its future well-being, is to all nations an ever-present wonderment and speculation a country, Sir, whose government was constituted on a solid basis by the undaunted courage and leading ability of your grandfather, and of my august ancestor, the immortal Mehemet All And it was by treading in his footsteps that you brought it to such a high degree of progress and civilisation: and this(Typographical errors above are due to OCR software and dont occur in the book.)
