

Steve Jobs was not a genius inventor. Steve Jobs was not a computer scientist. Steve Jobs did not hesitate to steal ideas from competitors and employees. Its time to tell the truth about the person that was Steve Jobs: a great boss, a fantastic negotiator and a marketing genius. But not an inventor. Using quotes from Steve Jobs himself and his collaborators, this book helps us understand what his role was at Apple. Various examples are cited as the creation of the Apple II, Macintosh, iPhone and the iPad. Finally, the real nature of Apple products is revealed: there is no revolution. The Apple II was not the first personal computer, the Macintosh was not the first computer with a graphical user interface, the iMac is a common computer and the iPad is not the first tablet. Are you ready to read the truth?
